St. Anne, a Grandmother for all Generations

Who was St. Anne? As is the case with many figures in early Christianity, virtually no concrete historical facts survive about St. Anne and her husband — what details we have, including her name, are handed down through tradition. But we know with absolute certainty two things: she was the mother of Mary and the grandmother of Jesus Christ. From these two indisputable facts, we can derive a host of others: she was a Jewish mother, and one who was likely very devout in her worship of God and her observance of his laws. To effectively conceive, bear and raise the Mother of God, she had to have been showered with a multitude of graces that would aid in her protection and formation of Mary.

But we can only wonder if she had the honor of being involved in Jesus' early life — no mention of her is made in the New Testament. Did she worry frantically when Mary and Joseph had to flee to Egypt to preserve the life of their infant son? Did she rejoice when they returned to Nazareth, and delight in time spent with her grandson as he grew up? Did God grant her any intuition as to the Passion and death Jesus would face, and if so, how did her grandmotherly heart bear it? We can only speculate.

St. Anne has proven her devotion to the disciples of her grandson throughout the millennia. She has long been honored as the patroness of grandmothers and women in labor, and her intercession is everywhere invoked by Catholics endeavoring to find a good spouse (grandmothers do make the best matches, after all).

Ultimately, the figure of St. Anne is a beautiful manifestation not only of the love that exists between multiple generations of families, but multiple generations of the Body of Christ. She is a reminder to love Christ as perfectly as possible — and to love him as perfectly as possible wherever he may be found, especially in the form of the elderly, the sick or the abandoned.
